UNION STATE CONVENTION.

The Union voters of the various Counties of the State of Oregon, who are in favor of the continued and vigorous prosecution of the present war to the complete and final suppression of rebellion and extinction of treason, and in favor of hearty and efficient support of the authorities of the General Government in their efforts to protect and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States and preserve and perpetuate the Union, and who are willing to combine for the election of men of like principles to all offices in this State, are respectfully and earnestly invited to hold conventions according to usual custom for election of delegates to a State Union Convention, to be held at Albany, in Linn county, on Wednesday, the 30th day of March 1864, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Representative to Congress and State Printer, electing delegates to the National Union Convention, and providing for the selection of candidates for Presidential Electors, and transacting such other business as the Convention shall deem proper.

We respectfully recommend the holding of County Conventions on the 12th day of March, 1864.

We also respectfully recommend the holding of Conventions of delegates from the judicial districts at the time and place of holding the State convention, for the nomination of candidates for Supreme Judges and Prosecuting Attorneys in the several districts where vacancies shall exist.

The several counties will be entitled to delegates in the State Convention as follows: Benton 5, Clackamas, 9 Clatsop, 1 Columbia, 1 Coos 1; Curry, 1, Douglas 8 Jackson 10, Josephine 6, Lane, 8, Linn, 12 Marion 12 Multnomah 8 Polk 5 Tillamook 1 Wasco 10 Washington, 4 Yamhill 6, Umatilla 2 Baker 3—Total 112

The Oregon Senators.

The Portland correspondent of the Bulletin, in a recent letter, after quoting an article from the OREGONIAN in which we had spoken of the disappointment felt by those who had trusted Messrs Nesmith and Harding, makes comment as follows:

> As to who "trusted" the Senators, a few words will make it more apparent. To commence with the youngest in life and the Senate—Harding. He got himself elected in September 1862 by a Union Legislature composed in great part of men of Republican or anti Democratic antecedents and sympathies, and strongly for the Administration. At the time it was pretty generally understood that Harding regarded the old Democratic party as defunct—as an institution that had served its purpose in this world and gone into liquidation and history. True there was no written or public declaration from Harding to that effect, but his daily walk and conversation said as much, and he must have known that he was so understood by many of those who supported him. If his conduct proves to be otherwise than in accordance with these impressions, those who elected him and trusted him will have a right to complain. Harding is not a speechmaker, but his votes in the last session of Congress were Administration through thick and thin, with the exception of the Indemnity bill. I think they will be of the same general character this session. True, Harding talked a little Vallandighamish when at home the past summer, but he evidently labored under an incorrect impression of the bent of the public mind at that time. By the light of subsequent events he has re examined the subject and will doubtless endeavor to maintain his original position in the Union party. His course will have much influence on the public mind here. Persons not a few, regard him as a model of political sagacity, and are ready to say, "Where Ben is, there will we be also."

If the friends of "Ben," are satisfied with this statement of his political principles, we ought not to complain; if he talked in favor of Vallandigham, so as to show himself bending with the public mind, as he understood it, it is a poor compliment to his sincerity while it admits his blunder. But it is said "he has re examined the subject by the light of subsequent events, and will endeavor, &c" We confess ourselves at a loss to understand what "subsequent events" could give light as to the position of the Ohio traitor, which Harding and every intelligent man did not possess when the talk referred to was made, unless the defeat of Vallandigham opened his eyes to the fact that such a kind of Democracy was not likely to be popular, and taught him that he had better shift his steering oar, or run the risk of being cast away on the shoals of secession sympathy. The simple fact is, Mr. Harding has not changed much—there is nothing about him subject to that—but he supposed the people bad, and his politics are intended to be like those of the majority, and so last summer, thinking Ohio would go Democratic, he talked about illegal arrests and played Democrat, and for once made a mistake, and now he will not do so any more, until he is sure the Democracy is ahead again, when of course he will be with it. In that view, the correspondent is right in saying that "his course will have much influence on the public mind here," but in no other, for the sagacity evinced in discovering the strong side has lost the control which it formerly had, and men in Oregon are becoming very much disgusted with politicians who have no fixed and settled rules of action—whose sole object is always to be on the winning side and to demand tribute and honor from every party with which they act.

The correspondent's allusion to the other Senator is worth reading:

> Nesmith was elected before the war by a personal combination between the Douglasites and the Republicans. The main significance of the matter so far as he and his political friends were concerned was more personal than political. To overthrow the power of General Lane and go to the Senate were the chief objects. Other matters were left to the future, and governed by circumstances. The Republicans who voted for Nesmith did so for a consideration—the election of Colonel Baker. In the Senate Nesmith's action has been generally with the Administration. With Mr Lincoln he was for a long time a personal favorite. The Oregon Democrats affect to regard him as a Republican, an abolitionist, etc., while a large portion of the Republicans consider him only as a temporary ally. But this, I imagine, arises more from difference of nature, taste and education, in regard to what I may call the modern amenities, than any practical political action of the Senator. Senator Nesmith is by nature and habit one of the people whom we call figuratively "the great unwashed"—I use the phrase in no opprobrious use. Tea is not his beverage, and his strong stomach rejects the moral and intellectual ointments of "bran bread." His "bringing up" has been principally among persons who, however known or called of men, were by nature and condition democrats—democrats in their manners and tastes, prejudices and sympathies, without reference to the peculiar political issues then before the public. Making due allowance for these social and aesthetic differences between our older Oregon Senator and the more speculative ideal state of the Republican party, I think it will be found that on the lower plane of practical politics they will not materially disagree.

Insurance

It seems to be supposed that Oregon is unable to do anything for itself, but must be dependent in all respects upon California. The steamers and vessels that bring merchandise, and carry away our produce, belong to foreign capitalists who are making vast profits upon our business, a portion of which might as well as not, if the requisite enterprise were manifested, be retained by our citizens. The same may be said of many other departments of trade and business, but at this time, we wish to call attention particularly to the matter of Fire and Marine Insurance. Portland and other towns in the State are annually contributing thousands of dollars to the profits of corporations in San Francisco, in the Atlantic cities and in Europe, which might just as well and as advantageously be kept at home.

There is no mystery or extraordinary skill or experience requisite for managing the affairs of an insurance association, on the mutual principle, or upon a stock basis; the estimates of risk and peril have been so well and thoroughly discussed, compared and considered, that the business is brought as nearly to a science regulated by established rules, as anything can be. The rates now charged by foreign Companies are so high, as almost to prohibit any one, except in extreme or peculiar cases, from insuring, and while in most of the towns and villages at the East, there is hardly a dwelling uninsured, the reverse is true here. Why should there not be a company established among us, composed of our own citizens, having mutual interests to protect, and prepared and willing, at reasonable rates, to guard them against loss? Such an investment has been found to be very profitable in California, and we are confident that in Oregon, one well managed company would in less than a year find abundant and lucrative patronage. Let us endeavor to promote the wealth of our State and community, by encouraging and promoting every measure, which will tend not only to make us independent, but by the profitable employment of our own resources will preserve them from being sent abroad and scattered for the benefit of those who do nothing for our advantage or benefit.

GEN GRANT'S VIEWS ON SLAVERY.—In a speech delivered recently in Philadelphia by Senator Wilson, the speaker quoted a sentiment on the slavery aspect of the war, the authorship of which he attributed to Gen Grant. Some of our journals having questioned the veracity on this point of Mr Wilson, the Tribune furnishes the following extract of a letter written by the General to his friend, E. B. Washburne, the representative in Congress from Illinois.

"The people of the North need not quarrel over the institution of Slavery. What Vice President Stephens acknowledged as the corner stone of the Confederacy is already knocked out. Slavery is already dead, and cannot be resurrected. It would take a standing army to maintain slavery in the South if we were to make peace to-day, guaranteeing to the South all their former constitutional privileges. I never was an Abolitionist, not even what would be called Anti Slavery, but I try to judge fairly and honestly, and it became patent to my mind early in the Rebellion that the North and South could never live at peace with each other except as one Nation, and that without Slavery. As anxious as I am to see peace established, I would not, therefore, be willing to see any settlement until this question is forever settled."

This extract embodies the disputed quotation of the Massachusetts Senator.

A TRUE HERO.—A Chattanooga letter says while riding up Mission Hill, on the memorable 25th, turning to the right or left, to avoid treading upon wounded heroes, I dismounted to give water to a dying boy, who lay upon his gun with a bullet hole through his hip, when a few yards distant I observed an officer being carried down the hill on a stretcher. Riding up, I inquired

"Who have you here?"

"Adjutant Marsh, of the 21st Michigan," was the reply.

"Where are you wounded, Adjutant?"

"In the left arm," was the reply.

"Badly?" I inquired, when, a smile lighting up his face, at the same instant that I discovered the arm adhering to the body by a small piece of flesh, he replied.

"My arm is gone, that's nothing, we've beaten them, thank God, and the slur of the Chickamauga defeat is obliterated. Let the arm perish; such a victory is worth ten thousand arms."

A PLEA OF TREASON.—You are aware that there is a statute of this State, depriving traitors to the Government of the right to maintain any action in the Courts of this State, and the charge of treason being sustained, the right of action of the traitor is barred, however meritorious may be his cause of action. The following is an exact copy of one of the counts in an answer filed yesterday by that eminent barrister, James McCabe Esq, in Justice Robbins' Court in a certain action wherein one H—y My—rs is plaintiff and J. Sm—th is defendant. It is a good plea of the statute alluded to, and the answer being verified by Sm—th, the plaintiff must be nonsuited, or prove that he is free from the taint of treason. "And for a further and separate answer to said complaint, this defendant says, That the said plaintiff is a foreigner by birth, and became a citizen of the United States by vaccination, and not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, Jeff Davis & Co, he, the defendant, became, and is a Secession cuss' and a traitor to the Government of the United States, which protects him, which Government he is sworn to protect, and that he, the defendant, is entitled to no favors at the hands of any honest man nor of the judicial or any other branch of the Government, "or any other man.'"—Cor S F Call

FOR THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—We understand that Heuston, Hastings & Co Clothiers of Montgomery street, corner of Sutter San Francisco, have sold a large lot of fine clothing for the American residents in Honolulu. Those who appreciate good clothes are sure to find out where they can be purchased, and you could not drag them into a slop shop with a cart rope.

Stewart, the New York merchant prince will sell $30,000,000 of goods this year. The September sales of cloths for men's wear alone were $700,000 and for the last year, in that department alone, will be from six to seven millions.

The Fur Trade of British North America

INTERESTING STATISTICS.

Notwithstanding the [illegible] last fall driving away [illegible] to trap [illegible] in the [illegible] the amount of furs gathered [illegible] the average [illegible] We are enabled to give the following statement of the amount marketed the past season:

Bought at [illegible] St. Paul	$200,000
Shipped [illegible] Red River	50,000
Total exports for 1863	$250,000

We have returns [illegible] in our possession in order to compare [illegible] of this year with those of former years. They show—taking three years—

1860	$[illegible]
1861	[illegible]
1862	[illegible]

By these figures which together [illegible] it will be seen that the fur trade [illegible] is on the increase. St. Paul is now the [illegible] largest fur market in the United States. [illegible] the annual [illegible] plains of the Upper Mississippi and the [illegible] amounts of between $100,000 annually. St. Paul is the [illegible] profits [illegible] and with increased facilities of communication with [illegible] railroad [illegible] It is thought that [illegible] now it has more fur [illegible] than St. Louis [illegible] robe.

[illegible] explained as arising from the low value of furs rather than from any [illegible] Since that date the value of furs has steadily advanced and is now higher than ever before, owing to the great demand for them in fashionable society. Everybody covets a set of furs and their wardrobe is not considered complete without such. The fancy fur trade is one of great importance in [illegible] city. The value of the wholesale and retail trade of New York in ladies' and gents' furs was given by the last census at a million and a half dollars yearly. Fashions and styles change in furs as in other goods for wear. The once despised mink is now the most fashionable cheap fur, and the [illegible] demand for it has raised the price of mink skins from [illegible] cents to [illegible] times that amount. Even musk [illegible] as fancy furs are now largely worn, and with skill in making up and dyeing proves to be a very cheap and useful fur for ladies' cloaks and victorines.

On looking at the books of our dealer we find that 3,500 bison or buffaloes have fallen victims to the arrow or the bullet on our north western prairies to supply civilized man with robes to keep him warm while riding in winter. These robes will always be a standard article for such purposes. They cost about $7 raw. An equal number of wolves—which fact one hears with pleasure—have also bit the dust to supply our fair countrywomen with elegant robes, worth $12 each, to keep out the biting air, while gliding over the snows of our northern winters. The Bruin family bewails the loss of 500 or [illegible] members. These skins, costing from $10 to $20, are also used for sleigh covers and for military purposes, as are also 1,000 skins of the red fox worth about $2 50 each. The mink, now mercilessly pursued, since the pelt is worth from $3 50 to $5 00, contributes 21,500 skins towards those elegant mantles and cloaks that every lady so covets. The musk rat species are prolific, and have given us fully 550,000 skins, worth from thirty to thirty two cents each.

Of the more rare and costly furs 2,255 otters have been captured from their lacustrine retreats and will soon do duty in the shape of gloves, mufflers, caps, etc, at $5 00 to $7 00 per pelt, and 640 fishers have been trapped, yielding the fortunate hunter $5 to $10 each. The marten family, one much prized, lost 18,000 members at the rate of $5 00 to $10 00 each. Of the cross fox, a very scarce and rare animal, only 79 have been caught. Good specimens bring $20.

During the winter a trapper brought in among a lot of peltries two skins which [illegible] nothing had ever been seen like them here before, were called the blue fox. They seem to be a hybrid between the cross fox and the silver fox. No one knew their value and they were sold at $2 each. The skins brought $25 in New York.

The greater portion of the furs marketed here come from the Red River region. They are brought in from the trading posts by Indians, who exchange them for ammunition, blankets, etc. The furs so collected are brought to St Paul annually in carts, and sold here, the carts go back loaded with goods.

The balance of the furs are collected in the streams and in the forests of our State by professional trappers. They go out in small parties and remain all winter, sometimes changing their camps from place to place, following up the fur bearing animals. Great quantities of furs are also caught by settlers on the frontier, who turn to account the enforced quiet of the winter season by trapping in a small way. The introduction of cheap and superior patent traps in late years has greatly extended the hunt for furs. Now every farmer's boy can make a few dollars during the winter by setting traps.

We mentioned casually the large fur producing region of which our city is naturally the entrepot and mart. This really embraces the entire Hudson Bay Company's district, known as Rupert's Land, and all of Minnesota and Dakotah to the Missouri river. The fur exports of this vast region are estimated at $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 annually.

There are 51 fur trading posts in the Hudson Bay region which is 1,077,000 square miles in extent, containing 42,600 Indians and 4,000 to 5,000 half breed hunters. It is estimated that 150,000 buffaloes alone are killed every year. The hides are taken, together with the tongues and a portion of the meat, while the tallow and meat wasted (which might be made available for export) is worth between $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. The Indians and half breeds of this vast region require supplies to the value of $10 per head, or $500,000 annually.—St Paul Press.

GEN. MCCLELLAN AGAIN.—The St Louis correspondent of the Alta makes these remarks upon the prospects of McClellan's being called to take command of the Army of the Potomac. The occasion is a fitting one for a renewal of the agitation in favor of restoring General McClellan to the chief command of the army of the Potomac. It would be just like President Lincoln to restore McClellan, except that he feared the radical sentiment of the country, which is nearly unanimous against Little Mac. A few months ago many Republican politicians, among whom may be named Senators Sherman, of Ohio, E. D. Morgan, of New York, Cowan, of Pennsylvania, Dixon, of Connecticut, Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, Governor Tod, of Ohio, George C Bates, of Chicago, Thurlow Weed, of New York, and several Republican representatives in Congress, were favorable to McClellan, but by writing that famous letter in favor of the election of the Copperhead candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, he alienated Governor Curtin of course, and with him all the Senators named, and many more who thought previously that he was above the filthy pool of politics. While he has gathered no new friends, and lost many within a year, he is still bepraised by the Copperheads, and the ranker the Copperhead the more ardent his advocacy of McClellan. Now when it is seriously proposed to restore the General to his old command these facts will rise up in protest. There must be something wrong, and it is not merely because the General is a Democrat that he is so hotly opposed. Grant is a Democrat, but is popular with all kinds of Union men because he lets politics alone and gains victories. The reappointment of McClellan, for good or evil would unquestionably raise a tremendous storm in the North.

TOOK HIS MOTHER'S ADVICE.—A young North Carolinian, who was taken prisoner at Rappahannock Station, begged our soldiers not to shoot him, for said he, "I have never fired a shot!" He afterwards said that he had just returned from a furlough home, and when he left his mother told him that he must not fire his musket, but try and get prisoner, for the Union soldiers would treat him kindly.

A noted New York gambler has cleared at his branch establishment in Washington, since July, 1861, nearly half a million of dollars.

AN ENGLISH CLERGYMAN ON THE AMERICAN WAR.—The Rev Baptist Noel, once a clergyman of the Church of England and chaplain to her Majesty, from which position he seceded to become as worthily illustrious in the ranks of dissent, has just published a book entitled "The Rebellion in America," of whose vigorous championship of the Federal cause the following is a pointed example:

Some writers deal with the United States as flies with a horse which has been galled. The beauty, fleetness, force and good temper of the animal are nothing to them. They are all eye to the sore. Pouncing on that they suck and suck. The sore is everything to them—food, delight, triumph. So they suck on, and by their hum and flutter, call swarms to suck with them. Others are more like mosquitoes who only exist to sting. When every one hear their buzz you may be sure they are going to insert their venom somewhere. Sometimes a correspondent, led by his principal, seems to me like a bull dog and his cruel looking owner. Both are bent on mischief; the former is never so well pleased as when he can make his teeth meet in the flesh of any one, and he mastering him with exultation to see the prowess of his dog. Hatred has been exalted since the beginning of this American rebellion, to an unusual eminence. We used to think it one of the works of the flesh which excludes a man from the favor of God (Gal v. 19-21) and that we supposed that charity was a virtue. But all things are lawful against the turbulent Democracy." Hatred, therefore, is put by some writers in the place of charity. Their creed in writing of the Yankees is "Though I speak with the tongue of men and angels and have not hatred, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. [illegible] Now abideth knowledge, talent hatred, but the greatest of these is hatred." The character of Jesus was marked by the Holy Spirit descending upon him in the form of a dove, but the inspiration of these writers, though they call themselves His disciples, would be rather symbolized by the tiger or snake. To endeavor to prove to them that the people of the United States are as much as ourselves intelligent, orderly, patriotic and humane, would be very much like trying to prove to Herodias the excellence of John, or to Caiaphas the mission of Jesus. If you give them evidence that the slaveholders are made by their system, cruel, selfish, imperious and tyrannical, they do not seem to like them the less on that account. Pharisees did not love Pharisees the less because Jesus revealed that they were like sepulchres, full of rottenness underneath their gilding. Why should the rotten dislike the rotten? I should no more expect generosity from such writers than I should gentleness from a boa constrictor, or fragrance from a common sewer. Even their charity has bitterness in it. If they deplore the distress in Lancashire, it is that they make you hate the Americans; if they lament the blood shed in the American war, it is to secure a triumph to the rebellion. But if any American meets with this, let him be assured that we are not all of this stamp in England. From Lord Russel down to the honest weavers in Lancashire we wish well to the United States, and should it please God to restore the Union we shall rejoice in their prosperity as sincerely as we do in our own. Leaving the flies to such sores, and the mosquitoes to sting, we shall thank God for his blessings to America as we do for his goodness to us."

A PILE OF CONFEDERATE CURRENCY.—We have been shown a large pile of Southern money, taken from the pocket of a blockade runner. About half of it was issues of the Confederate States, embracing three varieties, of which the latest, in point of mechanical execution, is, to say the least, very respectable workmanship. Excepting the uncouth figure of Jeff Davis in the centre the general appearance of the note is not unlike that of the genuine greenback. The other Confederate issues have a very trashy appearance, being coarsely lithographed, on miserable paper. One of the specimens has the capital at Richmond for a vignette and at the right corner a portrait of somebody looking like an unmitigated scoundrel, but we are informed by an exchanged Union prisoner that even in Columbia (S C) it is impossible to learn for whom it was intended. Another note has for a vignette the new State house at Columbia, and Vice President Stephens's portrait on the right corner. Nearly or quite all the work of printing is done at Columbia, only a short distance from the jail where our prisoners are confined, though much of it purports to come from Richmond. The collection which we have examined contains several notes of the old issue of North Carolina and Virginia banks, all of which sell readily in Wall street, though at a large discount. There is also a specimen of the Richmond city scrip, printed on the back of notes of the Merchants' and Farmers' Bank at Clarksburg Va, after the original had been reduced in size about one third by cutting. The latter is of the denomination of sixty cents. We are informed that Confederate notes sell in Columbia at the rate of about five dollars to one for U S greenbacks, and in Richmond, eight to one. The Union prisoners, however, are not allowed to circulate greenbacks, there being an arrangement at Richmond by which the latter, as received from friends at the North, are exchanged for Confederate money, at the rates current among money dealers. It is remarkable that, notwithstanding the penalty for counterfeiting Confederate notes is death, enormous amounts of bogus money are put in circulation by agents of the government, who take advantage of their opportunity to print from the genuine plates. It is known that immense fortunes are made in this way. The rascals concerned are doing a good work in depreciating the rebel currency, and to that extent are helping the Union cause.—N Y Journal of Commerce.

GEN BUTLER'S TRANSACTION IN SUGAR.—Gen Butler's administration of New Orleans appears to us to have been honorable, upright and just in every respect. It appeared so to the loyal citizens of the place, who liked him as heartily as traitors and secessionists hated him. He was strictly, severely just, he was too shrewd to be outwitted by the keenest of all the hundreds of "alien enemies" who tried conclusions with him, he so managed the business affairs of the department that it cost scarcely a cent to the Government, he made the wealthy traitors support the poor, who were in distress because treason had destroyed the commerce and industry of the place; he was generous, even when his generosity was abused; and as to the tales of fabulous millions accumulated by him during his administration there, every such charge has been proved false—and a man so shrewd as this Yankee General is too shrewd to cheat. When General Butler returned home he was called before the Committee on the Conduct of the War who examined him freely on every charge which had been made against him. That which was most circumstantially told was to this effect, that he had bought sugar in New Orleans on his private account, sent it to New York in vessels chartered by the Government, and there sold it. Said General Butler: "I did buy the sugar with my own money, and sent it North in Government ships. The ships were under charter; they had to have ballast, being empty; there is not a ballast stone within fifty miles of New Orleans. I should have had to send to Ship Island for sand ballast, at great expense and waste of time. The sugar was there and could be bought at a rate sure to yield a handsome profit in New York. I bought it, loaded the vessels with it quickly, sent it to New York, and with it invoices to Chase, the Secretary of the Treasury, with a full account of the transaction. I asked him either to take the sugar, sell it on Government account, and return me my money, or else to authorize me to sell it on my own account. He took the sugar and gave me back my money. Here are all the papers in the transaction."—N Y Evening Post.

MAGRUDER'S MONEY—THE ASSISTANT TREASURER'S ANSWER TO THE SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST HIM.—D. W. Cheesman, Treasurer of the Branch Mint, has put in his answer to the complaint of Maurice Dore, charging him with willfully withholding the money due on a certificate which it will be remembered was issued to the Magruder murderers for the bullion deposited with him. In his answer he denies almost everything set up in the complaint, averring that he received the bullion as a representative of the United States and not in his individual capacity; that the deposit was not made to him nor the receipt given by him, but was signed by the clerks. He denies that the bullion deposited was coined and delivered to him to be delivered to the holder of the receipt, averring that bullion deposited in the Mint is weighed and immediately becomes the property of the United States, and that the bars after being assayed are deposited in the Treasury vaults, and the value of the bullion is paid to the depositor out of funds set apart by the United States for that purpose. He denies that G Clark & Co are the owners of the bullion, and in fact that among the party depositing there was really any such person as G Clark, but says that it was the property of Magruder's heirs at the time of the deposit, and that it was and has been claimed of him by a special administrator of the estate. Furthermore, he says that he believes that if the receipt in question was ever transferred to the plaintiff, the plaintiff knew at taking it, that there was fraud, and that it rightfully belonged to Magruder's heirs. Moreover, he believes that no valuable consideration was paid for it.

STONEWALL JACKSON'S ADMISSION INTO HEAVEN.—I was much amused at the rebel prisoners' account of Stonewall Jackson's admission into heaven. They were strong admirers of Gen Jackson, and especially of the great success of his flank movements—"The day after his death," said they, "two angels came down from heaven to carry Gen Jackson back with them. They searched all through the camp, but could not find him. They went to the prayer meeting, to the hospital, and every other place where they thought themselves likely to find him, but in vain. Finally they were forced to return without him. What was their surprise to find that he had just before executed a splendid flank movement and got into heaven before them."—Cor Boston Recorder

DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM HAS EFFected cures in numerous cases where the most skillful physicians in this country and in Europe have been employed, and have exercised their skill in vain. Cases pronounced incurable, and surrendered as hopeless, leaving the patients without a single ray to enliven their gloom, have been cured by Dr Hall's Balsam, and the victims of consumption are now vigorous and strong as the rest among us. And these calculated ones, ones are not limited, mercurial, they are to be found out in every community where this most unrivaled remedy has been tested.

THERE is no other way to cure diseases but by first purifying the whole system so as to create a healthy circulation.

The first medical men of the age agree with us that no disease of any extent can be cured without using such medicines as will act directly upon the blood. Why many medical men have failed to cure chronic diseases is, because the medicines used have not been such as will act beneficially on the blood.

The many thousands of bottles which have been used by the public, and the many gallons and barrels supplied to the physicians, warrant us in saying that the last two years we have been most successful with our Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup in curing hopeless cases of chronic diseases than have any other remedies in the hands of physicians, or before the public.

It is now admitted that no combination known to the profession, acts so promptly upon diseases as our SCOVILL'S BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP.

ARK IRANOWNA.—The report that this had arrived in the river and was nearly the city, turns out to have been erroneous and great fear is now entertained that destined never to arrive at any port. We learn that she sailed from San [illegible]cisco for this place on December 13th, days after the Industry, and she must, have experienced the tremendous prevailing at that time. She was an vessel, heavily loaded with salt, and we leaked considerably. Something very must have happened to her or would have been here before now. She owned principally, we learn, by Capt H Chase, and commanded by Capt

NOTHER MINING COMPANY.—The "Oregon and Silver Mining Company" was incorporated at Salem, on the 8th inst., by W. add, Geo H Jones, Cyrus A Reed, S and J H Mitchell. The articles of incorporation limit its duration to three hundred years. Capital stock $587,500, shares each. Principal office in Portland; principally on the Santiam, but in the State of Oregon, and Territory of Idaho and Washington.

PARTURE ON THE OREGON.—Mr. G. M took his departure for Washington on steamer this morning. We understand carries for settlement a large number claims, involving an immense sum of Hon L F. Grover, of this city, is authorized agent for the reception and transmission of any business confided to his at Washington, such as settlement of &c.

RESH OYSTERS.—With the compliments of eny & Co., of the Eureka Exchange, shington street, came yesterday to this a sack of "Extra transplanted oysters," upon opening and re-transplanting, bivalves, were pronounced excellent Co serve them up constantly in shapes quantities to suit at their stand.

Jacs & Edgar, the enterprising express the Dalles and Canyon City route, who ured so far from home as to cross the mains, and snuff the breeze in Portland, start on their return this morning, taking with them all the news they can "rake scrape," to satisfy the appetites of their bound patrons. They leave on the steamer press, taking land when they can go no ther by boat.

Probably a lighter shipment of treasure the Oregon now carries with her from Portland, has not been known since the early days, and possibly may not be known again some time to come. Wells, Fargo & Co the moderate sum of about $30,000, which, when compared with some shipments before, would only be considered "pocket change" for the Messenger. No connection here, is the principal cause of the light treasure list.

The Couch arrived about eight o'clock last evening, having in tow the bark Almatia. No accidents had occurred worth reporting during the trip to Astoria and back, and Capt. Couch's opinion is that no more trouble will be had in navigating that part of the rivers.

The Julia left on Thusday morning, intend, if possible to "make the riffle," to reach the Cascades, since then nothing is known of her. With a view to ascertain how matters stand regarding the success or failure of her attempts, the Express will be dispatched this morning up the Columbia.

NEW TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT.—By referring to our advertising columns, it will be noticed that Mr. Wm. Currier, at Pierson & Co's, wants some first-rate tailors. Mr C. is just starting a fine business in this city.

The Willamette still continues to "spread itself," and, like whisky (since the last act of Congress,) water is considerably "on the rise."

THE UNBURIED DEAD AT CHICKAMAUGA.—Here is a new picture of rebel inhumanity: That nearly all our gallant, noble dead remain unburied on the field of Chickamauga, must send a thrill of horror through the land. They lie where they fell, appalling and ghastly, denied the poor hospitality of the grave-digger, and offending the sunshine. The word "man" and "humanity," should be blotted out of rebel lexicons. How shall I say it—the birds of prey settle upon that flesh and swine fatten their way through the ranks of glory! I have this from sources too many and direct, the horrible assertion is shaded by a doubt. And yet the rebels spend days in picking up fragments of iron, broken arms, anything that could be made of use, with which the field was strewn, and only driven off when the heavy air was poisoned by the unburied dead. "Look on this picture, and on this." Day before yesterday the gallant Hooker's Federal soldiers consumed the hours in giving burial to the rebels who fell in the recent battle. Are the feet of the avenging gods shod with wool, that they cannot hear their steps upon the threshold, hastening to punish the incredible barbarity of those traitors whose guns are playing as I write—traitors to Government, God and man-kind.

LIST FROM THE AQUILA.—A gentleman of San Francisco failing to obtain a contract from the agents of the Underwriters to build a coffer dam around the Aquila, telegraphed to his friends to call on the President and endeavor to get his influence with the Navy Department. After explaining the plan President Lincoln straightened himself up and remarked: "This plan reminds me of a man in Illinois, which swallowed a thistle and coffer dam head off." The party left.

COULD NOT SPOIL HIS GOOD LOOKS.—As is generally known, the President has had the varioloid. As usual, Old Abe could not refrain from his jokes, for he remarked to his physician: "There is one consolation about the doctor, it cannot in the least disfigure me."

HOW A NEWS BOY OUTWITTED ARTEMUS WARD.—We have heard this good story about Artemus Ward the Great Showman On his trip from Placerville to Carson he had for a traveling companion a San Francisco newsboy whose sallies of wit fairly eclipsed the imported wit of the "hero of the Babes in the Wood" So sociable did they become that upon reaching Strawberry Valley Artemus extended an invitation to his new friend to join him in something to drink They accordingly went to the bar when the newsboy called for a bottle of wine It was handed to them and the two individuals imbibed after which Artemus demanded the amount of the bill "Five dollars Sir" answered the bar tender The money was paid and the travelers resumed their seats in the coach After riding a short distance the show man turned to the boy and said, "I thank you run it pretty steep on me when I asked you to take a drink I expected it would cost me about fifty cents instead of which you made it cost me five dollars" The newsboy shut one eye, and after looking quizzically at Artemus for a moment replied "Don't mind it old fellow, you'll have no reason to complain you blacked me twice in San Francisco and I make it a rule to always play for even"

An Indignation Visit

"If Ruthy Ann Johnson said that she's no lady." The black eyes of Mrs Pendergrass shot fire.

"Well she did say it and a little more."

Very quiet and insinuating was the voice that said this. It came from a little woman, who looked almost too insignificant for a mischiefmaker.

"That my Hester was as ugly as sin?"

"Her very words."

"What else did she say, Miss Perkins?"

"Why she said that she could make a better face out of dough."

Mrs Pendergrass dropped the work she held in her hand. Her face grew red as scarlet. This was the crowning indignity. "A better face out of dough!" No wonder Mrs Pendergrass was "stirred up," to use her own words, "from the very bottom."

"Very well, Mrs. Ruthy Ann Johnson! Very well, madam! Very kind and very neighborly talk, upon my word."

"I wouldn't be excited about it," said Miss Perkins, in her quiet way. "She's talked as bad about me, but I let it pass."

"You ain't Maria Pendergrass," was the meaning response. "'A better face out of dough!' Give me patience! But never mind—I'll have it out with her, see if I don't!"

"Ruthy Ann likes to talk," remarked Miss Perkins, making an effort to soothe the feelings she had spurred into excitement. "She's a little glib with her tongue, you know, and is always trying to say smart things. I heard her use them very same words about Phœbe Jenkins not six weeks gone by. Phœbe is dreadful homely, you know, and has no more expression in her face than a turnip. I was excessively amused, and have laughed over it a dozen times since. I think she was only talking for talk's sake when she referred to Hester."

"I don't care what she was talking for," replied Mrs. Pendergrass, sharply. "But I can tell her this much, she's got to keep her glib tongue off of me and mine. Hester is as good looking as any of her brats. Wait till I see her!"

Miss Perkins tried to lay the storm she had raised, but Mrs Pendergrass was touched in a very tender spot. She had received a wound which no words of the mischief making gossip could heal. When her husband came home at dinner time, she told him, with much feeling, about what Mrs Johnson had said. Mr Pendergrass, whose temperament was as different from that of his wife as December is from June, treated the matter very indifferently.

"I never considered our Hester much of a beauty," he said. "But she's a good girl, which is best of all. As to her being ugly as sin, that is a mere extravagance of expression sometimes indulged in by thoughtless people, such as Mrs Johnson. It amounts to nothing, and I would let it pass as the idle wind."

"Indeed! and I'll not let it pass then. Nobody has a right to talk so about my Hester. I shall tell Ruthy Ann Johnson a piece of my mind."

"You'd better not, Maria. No good will come of it. You'll only make an enemy of her," said Mr. Pendergrass.

"I don't care!" The black eyes of Mrs Pendergrass burned like coals of fire. "I'd rather have such a woman for my enemy than my friend."

"Never make an enemy, even of a dog, Maria. It isn't good policy. Enemies are always dangerous."

But there was no use in talking to Maria Pendergrass. Passion had usurped the throne of reason.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, Mrs Pendergrass started for the house of her offending neighbor, a woman of equal spirit with herself. Not the slightest forewarning had Mrs Johnson of the intended visit. She was sitting with her basket in a chair by her side engaged in the important work of darning stockings, when Mrs Pendergrass came in, with a bustling, impressive air, and a face of no very mild aspect.

"Good afternoon, Mrs Pendergrass," said Mrs Johnson, pleasantly, rising as she spoke, "I am glad to see you."

"No you ain't!" was the unexpected answer to this cheerful salutation.

"What's the matter? What do you mean?" said Mrs Johnson, stepping back a pace or two, while her face became as scarlet.

"Just what I say," was replied. "You ain't glad to see me, you mean hypocrite!"

Mrs Pendergrass, at the very outset went quite beyond herself. She had thought over all the words she would say, and they were to be calmly spoken, but with a cutting edge upon them. But on meeting the neighbor who had so deeply offended memory and self possession fled, and instead of asking, as she intended doing, whether Mrs Johnson had spoken thus and so about her daughter Hester, she weakly and foolishly replied with insult to a kind welcome.

"Let me be what I am, no lady would use such language in the house of a neighbor," said Mrs Johnson.

"You are no lady, you hypocrite!"

Mrs Pendergrass was blinded with passion. Mrs Johnson was a large, strong woman, while Mrs Pendergrass was of rather diminutive stature. Outraged by this sudden, and for all she could see, wholly unprovoked assault, the former advanced suddenly upon her violent neighbor, and grasped her firmly by one of her arms, led her to the front door, and thrusting her into the yard, said, as she unclasped her vice like grip:

"Don't let me see you again until you know how to behave yourself like a decent woman!"

And the door was shut in her face.

Maria Pendergrass was bewildered, confounded, and doubly outraged by this violent assault upon her person, exceeding, as it did, a thousand fold in her estimation the wrong already inflicted through the person of her daughter. There was scarcely any wicked thing she would not felt inclined to do, by way of retaliation, on the spur of the moment had the opportunity been presented. One temptation was to throw stones and break her neighbor's windows! Another was to kill a pet lamb that happened to be lying on the grass plot before the door! and another was to trample on a flower bed in which some valued plants were just beginning to unfold their tender leaves in the genial sunshine.

But she refrained, not in consequence of a preponderance of right sentiments, but because such acts would too feebly express her great indignation.

The fiercer the tempest, the sooner it is over. Violent passions quickly exhaust themselves. By the time Mrs Pendergrass reached home, the thermometer of her feelings had lost many degrees. The range was far below fever heat.

We cannot say that she felt particularly well satisfied with her own performance in the rather serious comedy at Mrs Johnson's which had reached so sudden a termination. She had studied her part thoroughly, but on the stage, forgot even the principal passages and blundered in consequence most terribly. Instead of helping matters any she had made them ten times worse by presenting herself as an assailant instead of one demanding explanation and redress.

"I'm glad I didn't break her windows, nor kill her pet lamb, nor trample on her flower bed!"

Mrs Pendergrass said this to herself quite soberly, as she sat alone in her room, less than half an hour after her return from that fruitless indignation visit.

"Now, haven't I gone and made a fool of myself?" she added with a depressing sense of humiliation, as the remembrance of what she had done presented itself with mortifying distinctness. "What must Ruthy Ann Johnson think of me? She'll tell her husband of course, and he's a fiery hot-headed little whiffet, and will be after Pendergrass for explanations. I'm mad at myself. Why didn't I talk to her right? I had it all laid out, every word was in its place. I'm a fool! Maria Pendergrass, you're a fool!—there!"

Very meekly did Maria Pendergrass bear this self denunciation, though if anybody else dared to express a similar estimate of her character she would have given a very different exhibition of her quality.

"I wish Miss Perkins had stayed at home and minded her own business!"

Ah! that is the reward your tattling mischief maker usually receives in the end, even from those who with over open ears invite the tale of evil.

"I've heard it said that she will stretch the truth, and it's as likely as not she has done so in this case. What if Mrs Johnson has never said anything of the kind? Or what if Mrs Perkins denies having told me?"

These were sober considerations.

"I've put my foot into it and no mistake!"

Rather a coarse comparison, Mrs Pendergrass, but forcible and true. People who make indignation visits generally do that thing. Your experience is quite up to the average of such experiences.

Mrs Pendergrass could not summon sufficient courage to speak with her husband about the exciting events which had occurred. She meant to do so in order to prepare his mind for a return indignation visit from Mr Johnson, which she was very certain would be made before the evening closed. Momentarily, from the time he came home at sundown, until ten o'clock relieved her of her anxious suspense, was she in expectation of this visit from Johnson.

The next morning found Mrs Pendergrass in rather a sober state. She could not look back on the events of the preceding day with any feeling of self approval. Her behavior at Mrs Johnson's was certainly of an extraordinary character, as was also the treatment she had received. Every passing hour she looked for some message from Mrs Johnson or for the visit of a friendly neighbor to inquire about the strange stories that were buzzing through the village. But the entire morning passed without her seeing a living soul except her own family.

As for Mrs. Ruthy Ann Johnson, the subsidence of her disturbed feelings was almost as sudden as the excitement which had extinguished in a moment every fraction of self-control. When she grasped the arm of Mrs Pendergrass and thrust her violently from the house, she was angry beyond measure. When she turned back from the shut door and sat down by the basket of stockings from which she had started away on being so roughly assailed by her neighbor, the whirlwind of passion was over, and bowing her head upon her hands she wept violently. The provocation she had received was very great, but she did not look back upon it in any spirit of self justification.

The afternoon wore away, and evening brought the return of Mrs Johnson's husband. She wished to talk with him about the unpleasant affair, but he was an excitable and not very wise little man, and she feared to trust him with her version of her story lest he should do something that would only make matters worse. She had to bear the burden of her unpleasant thoughts alone.

Like Mrs Pendergrass she passed most of the day in a condition of unhappy suspense, every moment expecting some annoying message, or visit in company with interested friends from the neighbor she had handled so roughly. She did not go out to see any one, for she really felt ashamed to look a neighbor in the eye, after she had disgraced herself by such unwomanly conduct. No one came near her all day, and this she regarded as an unmistakable evidence that Mrs Pendergrass had been all over the village giving her version of the story.

INDUCED by the extensive sale and universal popularity of Hoofland's German Bitters, (purely vegetable,) hosts of ignorant Quacks and unscrupulous adventurers have opened upon suffering humanity the flood gates of Nostrums in the shape of poor Whisky, vilely compounded with injurious drugs, and christened Tonics, Stomachics and Bitters.

Beware of the innumerable array of Alcoholic preparations in plethoric bottles, and big bellied kegs, under the modest appellation of Bitters; which instead of curing, only aggravate disease, and leave the disappointed sufferer in despair.

Hoofland's German Bitters!

Are not a new and untried article, but have stood the test of fifteen years trial by the American public; and their reputation and sale are not rivalled by any similar preparation.

The proprietors have thousands of letters from the most eminent

CLERGYMEN
PHYSICIANS
CITIZENS,

Testifying of their own personal knowledge, to the beneficial effects and medical virtues of these Bitters.

Do you want something to strengthen you?
Do you want a good appetite?
Do you want to build up your constitution?
Do you want to feel well?
Do you want to get rid of nervousness?
Do you want energy?
Do you want to sleep well?
Do you want a brisk and vigorous feeling?

If you do, use HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

From Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects, I yet know of no sufficient reasons why a man may not testify to the benefit he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation, in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There are many preparations sold under the name of Bitters, put up in quart bottles, compounded of the cheapest whiskey or common rum, costing from 20 to 40 cents per gallon, the taste disguised by Anise or Coriander Seed.

This class of Bitters has caused and will continue to cause, as long as they can be sold, hundreds to die the death of the drunkard. By their use the system is kept continually under the influence of Alcoholic Stimulants of the worst kind, the desire for Liquor is created and kept up, and the result is all the horrors attendant upon a drunkard's life and death.

For those who desire and will have a Liquor Bitters, we publish the following receipt. Get One Bottle Hoofland's German Bitters and mix with Three Quarts of Good Brandy or Whiskey, and the result will be a preparation that will far excel in medicinal virtues and true excellence any of the numerous Liquor Bitters in the market, and will cost much less. You will have all the virtues of Hoofland's Bitters in connection with a good article of Liquor, at a much less price than these inferior preparations will cost you.

ATTENTION, SOLDIERS!
AND THE FRIENDS OF SOLDIERS

We call the attention of all having relations or friends in the army to the fact that HOOFLAND'S German Bitters will cure nine tenths of the diseases induced by exposures and privations incident to camp life. In the lists, published almost daily in the newspapers, on the arrival of the sick, it will be noticed that a very large proportion are suffering from debility. Every case of that kind can be readily cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. Diseases resulting from disorders of the digestive organs are speedily removed. We have no hesitation in stating that, if these Bitters were freely used among our soldiers, hundreds of lives might be saved that otherwise will be lost.

We call particular attention to the following remarkable and well authenticated cure of one of the nation's heroes, whose life to use his own language "has been saved by the Bitters."

PHILADELPHIA, August 23, 1862.

Messrs Jones & Evans—Well, gentlemen, your Hoofland's German Bitters has saved my life. There is no mistake in this. It is vouched for by numbers of my comrades, some of whose names are appended, and who were fully cognizant of all the circumstances of my case. I am, and have been for the last four years, a member of Sherman's celebrated battery, and under the immediate command of Capt. R. B. Ayres. Through the exposure attendant upon my arduous duties, I was attacked in November last with inflammation of the lungs, and was for seventy two days in the hospital. This was followed by great debility, heightened by an attack of dysentery. I was then removed from the White House, and sent to this city on board the steamer "State of Maine," from which I landed on the 28th of June. Since that time I have been about as low as any one could be and still retain a spark of vitality. For a week or more I was scarcely able to swallow anything, and if I did force a morsel down, it was immediately thrown up again.

I could not even keep a glass of water on my stomach. Life could not last under these circumstances; and, accordingly, the physicians who had been working faithfully, though unsuccessfully, to rescue me from the grasp of the dread Archer, frankly told me they could do no more for me, and advised me to see a clergyman, and to make such disposition of my limited funds as best suited me. An acquaintance who visited me at the hospital, Mr. Frederick Steinbron, of Sixth below Arch Street, advised me, as a forlorn hope, to try your Bitters, and kindly procured a bottle. From the time I commenced taking them the gloomy shadow of death receded, and I am now, thank God for it, getting better. Though I have taken but two bottles, I have gained ten pounds, and I feel sanguine of being permitted to rejoin my wife and daughter from whom I have heard nothing for eighteen months; for, gentlemen, I am a loyal Virginian, from the vicinity of Front Royal. To your invaluable Bitters I owe the certainty of life which has taken the place of vague fears—to your Bitters will I owe the glorious privilege of again clasping to my bosom those who are dearest to me in life.

Very truly yours, ISAAC MALONE.

We fully concur in the truth of the above statement, as we had despaired of seeing our comrade, Mr. Malone, restored to health.
